___ 2) Boys under the age of three should not see fully unclad women.

___ 3) The neckline of the garment must cover everything that is below the actual neck—whatever is halachically not considered to be part of the neck.

___ 5) The above obligation does not extend to the husband of a woman whose collar does not cover properly.

___ 6) The author, Rabbi Pesach E. Falk, shlita, writes that the second button down a blouse is usually too low in order to leave the top button open.

___ 7) A necklace worn as a choker can be relied upon to make an inadequate neckline kosher.

___ 8) A garment with a boat-shaped (or oval shaped) opening may not be worn alone or without rectifying the collar area.

___ 9) The neckline of sweaters that tend to stretch substantially should be checked often to ensure that the neckline has not stretched in a way that renders the garment unfit to be worn (until properly corrected).

___ 10) The opening of a back closure on a garment is allowed when the inner garments are covering the flesh that can normally be seen through the opening.

___11) The inset of an outfit, jacket, or dress may be skin-colored.
